Thierry Moke, 46 from Barnet resigned from his previous job as the pressure and demands were stressful, and he felt there was no career advancement. He desperately wanted a change in his job but felt despondent about finding work that was the right fit for him.

Having struggled for a few months to secure the right employment, his self-confidence was low, and he lost the motivation to apply for jobs. He then came across an Area Supervisor role by chance that was advertised by Tarem Services, which was of interest.

A few days later, Thierry decided to apply for the job and took advantage of the opportunity when it came knocking. Following his application in January 2019. Thierry was invited for a competency-based interview, where he was successfully presented with a job offer from Tarem Services. He has since found his confidence has increased enormously and hopes to continue to progress throughout the company in the future. Thierry’s responsibilities as an Area Supervisor, include training staff onsite, supervising daily operations, carrying out frequent site visits to ensure service delivery is met and other operational duties.

Thierry said, “As a Social Enterprise, Tarem is a very good company that cares for their staff and clients. It’s a great opportunity to work for this company and I get a lot of support that enables me to develop on the job. I have learnt so much and I’m still learning.

There’s a great relationship within the company as well, where that alone makes it a fantastic company to work for. And being a shareholder brings financial rewards and provides confidence for a bright future within the company.”

Thierry relishes his job and finds it rewarding going to work every day.
