

Barnet Integrated Perinatal Mental Health Pathway

This guidance has been developed to help all frontline health and care professionals and non-clinical staff who are involved in the care of mothers and babies to talk about perinatal emotional wellbeing.

A wide range of partners in Barnet have co-produced needs-based pathways for antenatal and postnatal periods. Details for each pathway is described to enable decision on actions to take, support should be offered and who can be contacted to meet the continuum of needs of the families.

Introduction

Perinatal mental health is complex and does not usually occur in isolation, requiring an integrated multi-agency approach. A wide range of partners in Barnet came together to develop an integrated pathway including maternity services, community, primary care and the third sector services to support the provision of effective multi-professional and multi-agency services for mothers and their families.

The needs of all mothers and their families in Barnet who were identified as having mental health concerns during the perinatal period are understood and linked to the right service at the right time. This can only be done by connecting services to enable families to tell their story once and to maximise opportunities for families to access relevant information, advice and help at the appropriate time.

This pathway has been produced with input from families with lived experience of perinatal mental illness as well as input from health and care professionals.

The pathway highlights the most appropriate and evidence based referral routes for those pregnant women and new mothers who require further health and social care support and (where appropriate) treatment.

It is based on the London Perinatal Mental Health Network's (2015)¹ care pathway which is in line with the NICE CR232 (2021)² and takes account of Barnet's demographics and unique challenges.

The multi-partner pathway group focused on how Barnet can provide universal screening. It was agreed that expectant parents would be introduced to Children Centres at the earliest opportunity. Parents would then be registered and be able to freely access a range of both universal and targeted services.

HSBBEH Home-Start will provide additional capacity through its volunteer-led service to support women in their homes. This meets the critical gap in the offer available to women as identified by the professional and parent survey.

It is expected that the Health Visiting service will continue to hold professional accountability for all families with children aged between 0 – 5 years and to provide the appropriate level of clinical oversight for work delegated to other commissioned support services.

² National Institute for Clinical Excellence (2021) CR232 Perinatal Mental Health Services: Recommendations for the Provision of services for childbearing Women. NICE, December 2021.

Mothers who have moderate level of anxiety or depression should also be referred to the Let's Talk - IAPT services. IAPT has a provision for perinatal mental health concerns.

In the case of escalated risk / severity women will be referred back to their midwife urgently or a health visitor if postnatal as well as informing GP.

Parents will be supported by the menu of interventions available in the community.

The diagram on page 6 shows the overarching process for potential contact points, identification and assessment of perinatal mental health needs. Identification will assist in ascertaining which of three pathways would best meet the mothers' and their family's needs. The processes, tools and need-based decision making for each pathway are described in more detail further in the document.

It is important to note that mothers and expecting mothers may enter into the pathway at any time during pregnancy and in the baby's first year. The pathways therefore have been designed to use every contact opportunity with mothers to discuss maternal emotional wellbeing.

Safeguarding guidance and protocols should always be followed in each pathway throughout the perinatal period.

The approach described is intended to supplement and support, rather than replace, the skills, expertise and clinical judgement of professionals.

For the menu of interventions please see the appendix 2.

Recognising Perinatal Mental Health Concerns

NICE recommends that all health professionals enquire about the mental health of all women.

Throughout the perinatal period, contacts with GPs, Midwives and Health Visitors are routine. In addition, there are a number of scan appointments where it will be appropriate to consider the mental health needs of the mother and provide the expecting mother with an information leaflet on perinatal mental health.

All health and care professionals and non-clinical staff should be routinely asking mental health needs and concerns using the standard identification questions, at each contact, in conjunction with professional judgement to determine an appropriate course of action.

NICE recommends the following questions:

Depression identification questions/The Whooley questions

During the past month have you often been bothered by feeling down, depressed or hopeless?

During the past month, have you often been bothered by little interest or pleasure in doing things?

Generalised Anxiety Disorder scale [GAD-2]

Over the last two weeks, how often have you been bothered by feeling nervous, anxious or on edge?

Over the last two weeks, how often have you been bothered by not being able to stop or control worrying?

These tools are to be used alongside a clinical assessment which should inform the final decision as to which pathway the patient will follow.

The needs of the women's partner, family or carers (including other children) should be considered. Anyone should be mindful that women may not initially disclose problems, for various reasons, but can be offered support via universal services.

Where there are maternal mental health concerns always consider the potential impact on the child and the unborn. If there are safeguarding concerns about a child contact MASH on numbers below.

Amber Pathway

Midwives or Health Visitors hold the accountability

Evidence of moderate emotional health concerns or possible attachment issues which may impact negatively on the parent-infant relationship and baby's development.

Assessment for health professionals

If a woman responds positively to either of the depression identification questions and scores 3 or more on the GAD-2 scale, consider using:

- Patient Health Questionnaire (PHQ-9)
- Generalised Anxiety Disorder scale (GAD-7)
- Edinburgh Postnatal Depression Scale (EPDS)
- Refer the woman to her GP, the Specialist Perinatal Mental Health Service or the Maple Service if severe mental health problem suspected
- Always use clinical judgement.

The professional conducting the screening must be trained to use these questionnaires.

Assessment for non-health professionals

If a woman responds positively to either of the depression identification questions, scores 3 or more on the GAD-2 scale, consider offering the Amber Pathway.

Approach

Offer the woman the Amber Pathway if there is evidence of:

- Parental or professional concerns about bonding with the baby
- Mild to moderate anxiety or depression
- Intrusive sleep difficulties
- Difficulties or traumatic birth or phobic of birth or pain
- Social problems e.g. finance, housing and/or relationship problems

- Ensure named health visitor or midwife notified
- Advice and guidance as per green pathway
- Refer to support services as below
- Midwife to inform health visitor at 28 weeks if at risk
- In the case of escalated risk / severity refer back to named midwife urgently OR GP if postnatal
- If a woman declines the support offered, notify GP.

Always seek consent when sharing information unless there is a safeguarding concern.

Parents and their families could be offered or referred to the following support services:

PARENTAL MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS

Let's Talk – IAPT

Psychological treatment in the form of counselling or CBT for parents who present with low to moderate anxiety and/or depression.

Face to face counselling is offered for parents suffering from depression and CBT treatment is offered at two levels for depression and/ or anxiety.

Support adults with a wide range of social, emotional, health and practical needs. The Wellbeing Navigator Team at the Hub connects people to support services such as employment support, debt management, welfare advice and housing. In addition, people are signposted to positive activities (such as walking, arts and crafts, knitting groups, yoga etc.) available in the community. The Hub also delivers personalised support including Talking Therapies, IAPT, Information & Advice and Advocacy.

HSBBEH Home-Start Barnet

1:1 support in the home from volunteers to improve the physical and emotional wellbeing of mums to be and new mums, and their babies, using a holistic life coaching model. It may be a first or subsequent pregnancy. Support is offered throughout the perinatal period.

Community Barnet – Online Wellbeing Programme

Offering online courses on different mental health topics. Available via smartphone, laptop or tablet. See service directory for contact information.

In the case of escalated risk or severity refer back to midwife urgently or GP and Health Visitor for postnatal.

PARENT-INFANT RELATIONSHIP

CAMHS

A wide-range of therapeutic interventions with parents and infants.

Red Pathway

Evidence of immediate severe mental health concerns which are likely to detrimentally impact upon the parent-infant relationship and the baby's development.

Screening

Women on the red pathway will normally be suffering from severe and/or enduring mental health issues. A woman should be identified for the Red Pathway if:

- There is any evidence of current or previous history of severe mental health illness such as bipolar disorder or psychosis and the health professional or the woman have concerns about relapse.
- During assessment, woman describes any of the below current concerns which are likely to detrimentally impact upon the parent-infant relationship and the baby's development

Current Difficulties

- Unusual beliefs around self or baby, e.g., thoughts around being watched
- Feeling or hearing things that others cannot
- Markedly unusual behaviour, affect or manner of speaking
- Inability to follow what is being said, distractibility

Approach

For health professionals only:

- Further assessment using PHQ-9 (Depression) and GAD-7 (Anxiety) and EPDS tools should be conducted and/or use professional judgement.

For all:

- Mothers suffering from severe and/or enduring mental health issues should be identified for the Red Pathway

- Evidence of severe mental health concerns refer to Specialist Perinatal Mental Health Service (SPMHS).
- If there is immediate risk refer to Crisis Team, call ambulance or A&E.
- Ensure GP, named health visitor or midwife notified
- If a woman declines the support offered, notify GP immediately alongside the midwife and/or health visitor.

Always seek consent when sharing information unless there is a safeguarding concern.

Where there are maternal mental health concerns always consider the potential impact on the child and the unborn. If there are safeguarding concerns about a child contact MASH on numbers below.

GREEN PATHWAY:

Barnet 0 -19 Early Help Hubs
The 0 -19 Early Help Hubs provide help and support to children, young people and their families from before birth up to the age of 19 (or 25 if they have special education needs or a disability). They recognise that all families face challenges and sometimes need support. 0 -19 Early Help provides this support as soon as possible to tackle difficulties for children, young people and families before they become more serious. The practitioners work with the whole family, but children are at the centre of all they do. Every family has strengths and 0 -19 Early Help can work with you to build on these. With parental consent, they can involve professionals that will work together so families only have to tell us about your situation once.	https://www.barnet.gov.uk/children-and-families/early-help-children-young-people-and-families
Barnet Children's Centre's
Residents of Barnet that are either expecting a baby or have children under 5 years of age are able to register and access Children's Centre services. The Children's Centres are able to provide information, advice and provide access to services and activities. The aim of the Children's Centres is for every child to have the best start in life, better opportunities for parents, provide good quality childcare, stronger and safer communities.	https://www.barnet.gov.uk/childrencentres

SMARTPHONE APPS

BabyBuddy

The app aims to help all families in the UK particularly young parents and those from disadvantaged backgrounds. Baby Buddy also provides the option for professionals to use the app to aid them in supporting new and expectant parents.

The app provides useful information through a personal Buddy to improve parents' confidence, knowledge and skills. The Buddy acts as a virtual friend to support families on the emotional, physical and social journey through pregnancy and becoming a new parent.

The Out of the Blue short films are fully integrated into the Baby Buddy app and helps to raise awareness and reduce stigma around perinatal mental health issues.

- Bump/Baby Buddy – your virtual expert on all things pregnancy/baby so you can ask her a question at any time. Tap on your Buddy and she will read the app content aloud to you
- Today's information – daily bitesize chunks of information tailored to your stage of pregnancy/your baby's age (available in the web version)
- Ask me – type in any question and your Buddy will answer with expert information (available in the web version)
- Bump/Baby Book – you can write about your thoughts and feelings of everything you've been doing during your pregnancy and the first few months of your baby's life. You can even add photos and share pages with friends and family.
