Annex 2(b): London Continuum Descriptors

This annex sets out risk and resilience charts, which have been developed to support the London Continuum of Need (annex 2(a) from Integrated Working Without Boundaries – The London Common Assessment Framework (CAF) Protocol).

These annexes form part of a series of annexes from Integrated Working Without Boundaries - The London Common Assessment Framework (CAF) Protocol.

The descriptors cover the following (non-exhaustive) list of policy areas:

- teenage pregnancy;
- substance misuse; and
- youth offending.

Further work on gangs and serious violence is being developed by the London Safeguarding Children Board and DSCF.

Substance Misuse Thresholds

Research has identified key factors known to increase the likelihood of substance misuse. The more risk factors a young person has, the more likely they are to be involved with substance misuse.

The Common Assessment Framework (CAF) is an important tool to aid the early identification of young people at risk of, or involved in, substance misuse. Young people exhibiting the risk factors described at Level 2 on the table below should be the subject of a common assessment and have a targeted support package put in place to support them (as exemplified below). Young people at Level 3 are already involved in substance misuse, so have additional support needs. Young people at Level 4 require specialist substance misuse interventions.

Ideally, need should be met at the lowest appropriate level of intervention with clear referral pathway in place and movement between the different levels of intervention. The CAF will also play a vital role in ensuring effective plans are in place for young people leaving targeted support or specialist treatment.

Teenage Pregnancy Thresholds

Research has identified key factors known to increase the likelihood of teenage pregnancy.

These can be grouped into:

- education related factors;
- risky behaviours; and
- family and social circumstances.

The more needs a young person has, the more likely they are to experience a teenage conception. Sexual activity alone is not a key indicator for risk of teenage pregnancy. A young person may not be sexually active but could have other key risk factors and be in need of targeted support to prevent teenage pregnancy. Protective factors should also be considered when working with a young person as these can reduce the risk of teenage pregnancy, even if many of the risk factors are in place.

The CAF is an important tool for the early identification of young people at risk of teenage pregnancy, ideally before they become sexually active. Diagnosis of need will enable professionals to put into place programmes of support.

Research shows that to be effective in reducing teenage pregnancy, support programmes should:

- intervene early – before the first sexual experience;
- focus on raising aspirations, attainment and self esteem;
- provide intensive 1:1 work and support the development of relationship with trusted adult;
- consider different approaches for young men and young women; and
- ensure that the workforce is equipped to identify and support young people at risk.

The needs identified at each of the levels below are applicable to both young men and young women of any sexual orientation. Sexual activity is defined as vaginal, oral or anal sex.

Youth Crime Prevention Thresholds

Extensive, credible and predictive research into youth offending shows a range of identifiable risk factors present in the lives of many children and young people. The presence of particular risk factors, or a combination of them, significantly increases the likelihood of children and young people becoming involved in criminal and anti-social behaviour.

The CAF can play a pivotal role in identifying these risk factors and providing the framework for managing them. The CAF does not replace the use of specialist assessments but it can act as an early warning mechanism on which specialists assessments can build on and enhance over time.

The CAF is not only relevant in the early identification of young people at risk, that is acting as a referral gateway into YOT and other integrated Prevention Programmes. It also can play a vital role in identifying if additional needs are present requiring an integrated approach for young people who offend and are known to the YOT. (needs a space) The CAF can play a vital role in ensuring effective resettlement plans are in place when statutory YOT interventions end or as part of an exit strategy for young people on the Deter Group who end their statutory YOT intervention.

An integrated and defined relationship between the CAF and the Youth Justice Board (YJB) Specialist Assessment Tools should ensure:

- prompt identification of those at risk of entering the criminal justice system;
- a significant contribution of youth support services to improving performance against the key national priorities such as reducing youth re offending and reducing the number of First Time Entrants into the Criminal Justice System.
